Campaigning on company time

Federal law prohibits candidates for union office from utilizing union or company resources in the conduct of their election campaigns. This means it is inappropriate to campaign on company time and use employer resources such as paper, copy machines or the mail system. Additionally, the company email system is considered an employer resource and should not be utilized for campaign purposes.

The prohibition against using employer resources, such as the email system, to promote candidates for union office applies to all situations where resources are used to promote a candidate(s) regardless of whether the party using the employer resource is running for union office.

Use of union bulletin boards for campaigning is prohibited.
